PETER ROBER – keynote speaker

Family Secrecy and Selective Disclosure:
About what is said in families, what is not yet said
and hesitations to speak.

Summary:

In families, there is always a tension between speaking and keeping silent.

Whatever is said in the between family members is a selection of what could have been said. This dialectic of openness and closeness, sharing and not sharing, revealing, and concealing has many forms and guises.

Sometimes things are kept secret deliberately. Some family members know, others don't know (although they may suspect, or sense there is something more than they know). Dealing with family secrecy may be a challenge for family therapists.

In this presentation, based on some detailed case studies, ideas will be presented of ways to deal with family secrecy in family therapy practice.

Presenter:

Peter Rober, PhD is clinical psychologist, family therapist and family therapy trainer at Context -Center for marital and family therapy (UPC KU Leuven, Belgium). He is professor at the Institute for Family and Sexuality Studies (medical school of K.U. Leuven, Belgium) where he teaches family therapy.
